--ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A coded presentation comprises a number of sub-presentations, each comprising a number of presentation elements. A presentation element is an elementary part that is to be presented and comprises text, audio, video or an image. A sub-presentation has an interface that provides a reference for the presentation elements in that sub-presentation. This reference can relate to timing aspects and to locations aspects relevant during play out, and to a priority as to whether or not the sub-presentation is to be played out.---
